

It's a slow process, usually-education, development, and growth. But it hasn't been so with Pearline. Pearline's success has been a wonder, from the start. All the more so when you consider the many poor imitations of it, which claim to make washing easy.

These things tend to confuse people, of course. They're forced on the public by peddlers, prizes, substitution, etc. No doubt they're often thought to be the same as Pearline. We protest. Don't judge

WILD REPORTS IN VENEZUELA. The United States Thought to

Raising Funds for War. The steamer Venezuela, Capt. Hopkins, from Venezuelan ports, has arrived at New York. The Venezuela sailed from La Guayra on January 1. She brings news that the greatest excitement prevailed throughout the country over the attitude of the United States government on the boundary question. Demonstrations were numerous in all the principal cities. Troops were constantly marching through the cities of Port Cabello, La Guayra and Caracas, and the American flag was carried in all the parades, causing the wildest enthusiasm among the populace.

It was rumored at La Guayra that the sum of $100,000,000 was being raised by the United States government to aid the Venezuelans in case war should be declared against Great Britain, Invasion Threatened.

A dispatch to the New York World from Caracas, dated January 8, says: News of grave import has just been re ceived from the Guayana frontier. The government is notified that troops, with rifle and cannon, from Demarara have arrived at Cuyuni, a station at the extreme limit of the English claims in the disputed territory, and the scene of the Yuruan incident, where English officials were arrested by Venezue lans.

The number of the invaders is uncertain.
Some of the papers say there are over one thousand, but that is probably an exaggeration. They are possibly a few hundred Gulana police. The government gives no official notice as to what action it will take. It is probable, however, that it will send some troops to the scene, with orders to be cautious, but at the same time to resist invasion.

To Abolish the Indian Office. Mr. Teller has introduced in the Senate a till to abolish the office of commissioner of Indian affairs and the assistant commissioner of Indian affairs, and to create in lieu thereof a board of Indian commissioners. It provides that the President shall appoint from civil life two Indian commissioners, to hold office for four years, and of different political parties; and to detail an officer of the regular army

BY SIR ROBERT PEEL.

Arnold Hopetoun, a clerk on a small salary in the foreign office at London, is engaged to be married to the handsome Bella Carstairs, who with her mother is obliged to keep up appearances in very reduced circumstances. Bella believes that she loves Arnold, but is unwilling to marry him until he gets a more lucrative position which his influential uncle, Lord Drillingham, has promised to obtain for him, Lord Drillingham neglects the matter and Drillingham neglects the matter and Arnold proposes to Bella that he and his cousin Kate, Lord Drillingham's daughter, pretend to be engaged, with the idea of increasing his uncle's interest in obtaining an appointment. She consents and he goes an appointment. She consents and he goes down to Deercourt to arrange the matter with Kate. Kate agrees, Drillingham approves of the engagement, and bestirs himself about the appointment. He obtains the offer of an important position in Canada, but Bella refuses to go to Canada. Kate calls on Bella and endeavors to persuade her, but in vain.

One must not play with love. The old dage has told us so, and Kate Drillingham at least had proved its truth by her own experience. Perhaps she had a slight penchant for her cousin before the farce had begun, but at any rate the performance of it had done serious damage. The interview at Hampstead had shown her the fact beyond the possibility of any further self-deception, and she knew now-acknowledged now-the motive of her recent anxiety to see Arnold and Miss Carstairs quickly

Well, the young lady, the devoted Bella, was less anxious! That was perfectly evdent. She was not disposed to make anything even faintly resembling a sacrifice for the sake of the man to whom she was engaged. "Then," said Miss Drillingham, why should I make one for hers? I will not! I am doing what Arnold asked of me with her own approval. If my compliance should lead to his falling in love with me and telling me so, he will receive an answer very different from the one he would have received yesterday. I consider I am perfectly justified. I won't repress my feelings for the sake of that vulgar piece of modern Sevres—that is what she looks Eke! I won't fight with myself. I won't be ceol toward him when I don't want to be resent, for he is silly enough to care for ou, but I shall win and I will beat you on any particular day. He only realized by degrees that a change had come.

"I shall win, I shall beat you yet."

And it was difficult to define what the change was. Well, perhaps for one thing they talked less of Bella—for Kate would have scorned to disparage her to him, how-ever artistically. Perhaps also they did not refer so frequently to their mock betrothat -the jesting allusions to it were absent from their conversations now. But still it was hard to express the new difference in words; he merely realized that they talked together more like any other man and woman who are seeing a lot of each other; for example, he could not have told her today that she made him think of her as a "chum"—"a jolly good fellow." He remembered that he had said that once, and wondered why he did not think so still.

Not that she was any the less agreeable—far from it. He had never liked her so much, never before known she was so charming, so graceful, so witty. She had rot mentioned her fateful visit to the Carstairs to him, and when he heard of it, it was a fortnight afterward, and from Bella He received the news with complex emotions. Euphemistically as the interview was described, he was intelligent enough to comprehend that his cousin could not have an opinion in it altogether favorable to his flancee, and this view was confirmed. coreover, by the silence she had maintained on the subject.

It had been very tactful of her, very nice, to have said nothing to him. Another wo-man would have said: "I went to endeavor to further your interests, and the girl would rot listen to me." Of course, Bella was helpless in the matter-it was her mother's in fluence that was to blame—but Kate could not be expected to know that, and she had certainly displayed great delicacy toward

Next time he saw her he thanked her for it. "By the way," he said, "I did not know of your visit to Mrs. Carstairs and Bella of your visit to Mrs. Carstairs and Bella till the other day. It was awfully good of you, Kate. I am sorry you should have had the trouble—and for nothing."

"Oh," she murmured, with a shrug, "I was in town, and I thought it might be ad-On the whole, I think it was very plucky of her to decide to wait for something here. It will be much more agreeable for you if you get it." He krew that this was a grayou get it." He krew that this was a cloud clous falsehood, but, man-like, he continued the subject, instead of allowing it to drop.

"But you never told me of your call," "But you never told me of your call," he said. "I had no idea you had been

"Didn't I?" she said; "I meant to." Both paused, and looked through the winlow at the lawn.
"What do you think of her?" he asked.

"She is very delightful, very pretty"— it was impossible to say less—and "I congratulate you heartily, Arnold."
But her tone lacked heartiness, and he felt it. She had formed a wrong estimate of Bella; he must justify the girl at once.
"I hope," he said, "you do not think she is acting wrongly in declining to live abroad? Really it is not she at all; it is the old lady. Bella is a very dutiful daughter almost a child in some things."

"Oh, I saw that, naturally." "Oh, I saw that, naturally."

"You must not—of course you would not —imagine that she is not fond of me. Girls vary very much: Bella's disposition is not a strong one. And besides when it had come to the point I dare say you yourself would have hesitated to leave England."

"I do not think that," answered his cousin; "I should not have advised anything that I thought undesiratle."

"No, no," put in Hopetoun, "I'm sure you wouldn't; but of course your view is different under the circumstances. I mean there ent under the circumstances. I mean there is not the necessity for you to we'gh all the pros and cons carefully, is there? If you had been Bella herself, you would feel the gravity of the step, as you cannot be expected to do as it is."

expected 'o do as it is."

She did not reply, and he regarded her uncertainly. Twilight was falling, and the room was filling with shadow. In the vagueness her face looked softer and more beautiful, he thought; the proud mouth was more gentle. He felt very tender to-ward her, very affectionate. He remembered that she was doing much for him, and that such return as sne had received had given her the right to make him a reproach that she had not uttered. An impulse that be could not resist urged him to contradict his last words.

dict his last words.

"I believe you would have gone," he murmured. "I beg your pardon! If you had cared for me, I believe you would have gone, Kate."

She neither acknowledged nor denied.
"Thank you." she said; "but don't let us discuss that! and indeed I can't say; I am not in love with you, and you are many miles from being in love with me."

"I winder..."

"What do you wonder?" she murmured.

"I was going to say a stup!d thing. I was going to say that it was fortunate for my peace of mind that I did not see more of you before I became engaged."
She smiled pensively. And why?"

"Really 'why?"

"Yes—'really.' We ought to be able to

Then because I stem have been so pro-

"But suppose I had said 'yes?"

Her tone was one that made it impossible for him to be sure she was jesting, although his reason told him that she must be. Her position, too, in the deepening dusk now hid her features. He only saw her indistinctly, and the timbre of her voice coming to him in the obscurity gave him a strange thrill. "If you had said 'yes,' I should have adored you!"

With a sensation of unreality he waited for her answer, It seemed extraordinary to have told Kate Drillingham he would have adored her, even in a speculative mood. He wished he could see her plainly; and yet somehow he did not wish to move. The queer moment had a fascination that he was unwilling to spoil.

Suddenly she laughed and startled him:
"You would not know even how to hold

"Should I not!" he stammered. "You are always throwing it at me that I once said thought of you as a man. Why shouldn't know? Come and let me try!" They were quite close together now, for

They were quite close together now, for she had approached him as he spoke, the white hands hanging to her sides.

"Let me try," he repeated, lifting it awkwardly. "But it is so unresponsive! Of course, any man would look a fool with a hand like that. There is no life in it."

"Oh," she said, "this is your rehearsal, not mine! I told you you would not know how to take my hand, and you don't."

Her eyes flashed a glance straight into his own, and something possessed him like an unfamiliar devil. His grasp on the lissom fingers tightened; his arm stole round her walst. "I should begin like this," he said, "and then—and then I should kiss you! What do you say to that?"

"I say you have demonstrated your ability quite enough," said Miss Drillingham, disengaging herself. "We'll omit the kiss, if you please, and take the will for the deed. Ring the bell, will you? I don't know where Soames is with the lamps."

Her tone was careless and matter-offact.

But Hopetoun, as; he obeyed, was conscious of a curious dissatisfaction. He felt that he had missed something which it would have been very delightful to have had, and he was annoyed.

Lynched Two Negroes. Harrison Fuller and Frank Simpson, two negroes, who were to have been placed on trial at Lexington, Tenn., yesterday, for an outrage upon Mrs. Pomeroy and her sixteen-year-old daughter, white, were lynched Tuesday night. The outrage upon Mrs. Pomeroy and daughter occurred last August. Fuller and Simpson were arrested shortly afterward and identified by their

They were taken to Nashville for safe keeping, where they remained until Tues-day morning. The authorities supposed ex-citement at Lexington had subsided and the prisoners were returned for trial. When the train arrived at Lexington it was met by a strong mob, the sheriff overpowered and the prisoners secured. They were taken into the woods some distance from town, where fifty shots were fired into the bodies of each. Prior to the outrage upon Mrs. Pomeroy and daughter, Fuller and Simpson were guilty of a similar crime upon another white woman.

A CONFIDENTIAL CHAT

between two meh or women generally develops the fact that one or both are troubled by sickness of some kind. One man is all right except his theumatism, another has a "slight touch" of dyspepsia, another has a "slight touch" of dyspepsia, another has bilious headaches, and another is too nervous to sleep well. What's to be done about it? The situation is serious. Little things have a way of getting Big. Big diseases are bad things. Sleeplessness brings irritable nerves, loss of flesh, loss of appetite. Sleepless people soon get their bodies into such a condition that disease germs find it easy to lodge there and propagate. People die to lodge there and propagate. People die from the aggravation of an aggregation of little things. The more promptly a disease or disorder is met the more quickly it is cured. Most all sickness starts in the stomach, liver or lungs. Rheumatism, scrofula, eczema, consumption, come about because insufficient, impure or impoverished blood is present. The diseased blood finds the weakest spot in the body and a local symp-tom appears. If the impurity is supplanted with good, rich, red, healthy corpuscles, the disease will have nothing to feed on.

If the proper cleansing medicine is sent to the seat of the trouble, it will force out the germs and repair the damage done.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a cleansing, purifying medicine, a enricher, a nerve strengthener. It is an efficient tonic, aids digestion, creates healthy appetite and healthy flesh. It does not make people "fat." It makes them strong. It makes useful flesh—solid muscle. It will cure any sickness that has its source in the directive common or has its source in the digestive organs, or through them in the blood.

STATEHOOD OF OKLAHOMA.

Two Factions at War in the Convention. The statehood convention was opened at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, yesterday afternoon with good prospects for a merry war of factions. A large share of the delegates favor forming a state with the Chickasaw nation added, and with a provision allowing other nations of the Indian Territory to come in as they wish. Others are strongly opposed to such action, and desire a single state formed by the union of Oklahoma and Indian Territory. A fight was in sight as soon as the convention met at 10 o'clock. Frank W. Thompson, a "double stater," and W. T. Walker, a "single stater," took sides on each end of the platform, and tried to talk at the same time. At once the delegates mounted chairs and each faction yelled for its side. Amid the clamor T.F. Hensley, a "doublestater," was nominated for chairman, and so soon as his name was mentioned he jumped to the stage. For five minutes he talked against the clamor. Gradually his loud tones drawned out the noise, and one delegate after another subsided and listend to his speech. Then the question of selecting the committee on credentials arose. Finally Chairman Hensley declared the motion to appoint five members on the committee car-point live members on the committee car-ried. Those opposed yelled an appeal from the decision of the chair. From 2 till 2:30 o'clock the delegates, 500 of them, howled. Then Patrick Nagle of Kingfisher pleaded for peace and harmony, and moved that the committee on creden-tials be composed of one from each dele-gation.

This was carried and then there was a lively quarrel over the recognition of the delegates from the Chickasaw nation. After wrangling for another half hour, Dick Flunkett, the noted ex-prize fighter, for-nierly of Denver, was appointed sergeant-at-arms. He walked to the stage, and his great length and breadth of form seemed to awe the delegates. They quieted down to awe the delegates. They quieted down and Plunkett said:

"Gentlemen, I am proud to be sergeantat-arms of this convention, which is the pride of the territory. We want order here and we have got to have it."

The delegates from the Chickasaw nation were recognized and the committee on credentials wetter.

dentials retired.
At 8:15 last night the statehood convention came to an end. At that hour, the committee on credentials having been un-able to report, owing to the strife between the "single staters" and the "double stat-ers," Chairman Hensley declared the convention adjourned sine die. For haif an hour afterward the utmost confusion prevailed, and, finally, when the uproar was approaching the proportions of a riot, Sheriff Deford turned out the lights and ordered the delegates from the hall into the street. This, it is believed, will end all organized effort to secure statehood from the present Congress.

In Curing Diseases All depends upon the ability of the physician sentiment, friendship, promises or advertising do not enter into the cure. The physician who knows what the condition is when he sees it, and has the brains and apparatus to apply the proper remedy, is the one you want. In the treatment of CA-TARRH, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, DEAFNESS or any nasal, throat, lung or car disease, I am the doctor you are looking for. Dr. Jordan, 1421 F St. N. W.
